

Announcing a special workshop event:

New Directions in Decision Making Research: An Italian-Israeli Workshop

Sponsored by: The Italian Embassy in Israel, The Israel Italy Chamber of Commerce, and DICE at IDC Herzliya

When and Where: June 1st, 2016; at the IDC campus, Psychology building room PE204

The workshop will gather Italian and Israeli researchers working on the behavioral and brain bases of economic psychology and judgment and decision-making. The event aims to explore the explanations and approaches to the study of economic psychology, judgment, and decision making, in a period in which the disciplinary boundaries are blurred and new interdisciplinary efforts have the potential to overcome limitations of the traditional disciplinary approaches. In this broader context, the workshop will host and discuss contributions coming from different research perspectives and studies carried out with different methods, such as neuroimaging studies, eye-tracking investigations, individual-differences studies, case studies, and traditional experimental work. The event will also host researchers working in areas such as memory, reasoning, and social cognition, whose studies have significant implications for understanding economic psychology or judgment and decision-making processes.
